San Diego – IVDiagnostics and a consortium of European Scientists have entered into an agreement whereby IVDiagnostics will exclusively license the use of specific genetic markers and proteins.

IVDiagnostics is a biomedical diagnostic company focused on diagnostic tests for blood borne and other diseases.

Dr. Burkhard Jansen indicated that on behalf of the consortium that "he is pleased to be working with a diagnostic company that can commercialize intellectual property with a potential in areas of great unmet needs.

Frank Szczepanski, CEO of IVDiagnostics noted that "the more we learn about monitoring patients for disease, the better physicians can track treatment, recovery, and effectiveness of therapy."

Joel Lirot, VP of Business Development from Rondaxe, is pleased to have advised Novelix and IVDiagnostics in this licensing effort and looks forward to a continuing relationship with both companies. Rondaxe is a consulting firm and service provider, enabling its Pharma and Biotech clients to maximize their value propositions via CMC, Software, and Virtual Business Development services.
